Introduction (30 minutes):

Icebreaker Activity: "What Makes an Entrepreneur?"

Divide the class into small groups of 4-5 students.

Provide each group with post-it notes in different colors. Ask them to write down qualities, skills, and traits they believe are essential for successful entrepreneurs.

After 10 minutes, have each group share their notes, placing them on the whiteboard under two columns: "Skills" and "Traits."

Facilitate a discussion around the attributes shared, guiding them towards identifying key entrepreneurial skills, such as creativity, adaptability, resilience, communication, risk assessment, and problem-solving.

Sure! Let's talk about "leadership skills" in a way that's easy to understand.### What is Leadership?

Leadership is when someone guides or helps a group of people to work together and reach a goal. Think of a captain of a sports team. The captain helps everyone know what to do, encourages them, and makes sure they work together to win the game.

Leadership Skills

Leadership skills are the special abilities that help someone be a good leader. Here are some important skills:

*1. Communication: This means talking and listening well. A good leader tells everyone what to do and also listens to their ideas. Imagine a teacher who asks students for their opinions on a project. This makes everyone feel included.*

*2. Teamwork: A leader needs to work well with others. For example, in a group project at school, a good leader will make sure everyone shares their ideas and helps each other to finish the project.*

*3. *Problem-

*Solving: Sometimes, things don't go as planned. A leader needs to find solutions. If a team is losing a game, the coach (or leader) might change the strategy to help them play better.

*4. Motivation: Leaders inspire others to do their best. Think of a cheerleader who encourages the team to keep trying, even when it's tough.*

Example of Leadership Skills

Let's say you are part of a school club. If you are the leader, you might:

- Communicate by telling everyone about the next meeting.
- Work as a team by asking what everyone wants to do for the club's project.
- Solve problems if someone can't come to a meeting by finding another time to share ideas.
- Motivate your friends by telling them how awesome their ideas are and how much fun you'll have working together.

Fun Fact

Did you know that according to a study by the Center for Creative Leadership, about 70% of people believe that leadership skills can be learned? This means that anyone can become a better leader if they practice!

Analogy

Think of leadership like being the conductor of an orchestra. The conductor helps everyone play their instruments together to create beautiful music.

Without the conductor, the musicians might play at different times, and the music wouldn't sound good. A leader helps everyone "play" together to achieve a common goal.

So, a "leadership skills question paper" is like a test where you might answer questions about these skills. You could be asked to give examples of good leaders or to describe how you would solve a problem as a leader. It's all about showing what you know about leading a group!

I hope this helps you understand leadership skills better!
